1% to 29%	A response where serious reservations exist. This may be because, for example, insufficient detail is provided, or the response has fundamental flaws, or is seriously inadequate or seriously lacks credibility with a high risk delivery will be unsuccessful.

0%	No Response or response completely fails to address the criterion under consideration.

26. ADDITIONAL CONDITION(S)

Research Ethics Framework

1. Introduction

The Contractor, in delivering the services the subject of this contract, will fully adhere to the following framework, which are intended to ensure that rights, privacy and confidentiality are maintained, that all research is carried out with integrity and transparency, and that the well-being of any participants are fully respected.

The Client acknowledges that these guidelines do not provide a complete set of rules for resolving ethical choices or dilemmas. New situations may emerge which require creative approaches to ethics issues. This ethical framework offers guidance – it cannot replace the need for self-critical, imaginative and responsible ethical reflection about issues which may arise in the course of research, but it can help guide and illustrate how to proceed.

2. General principles

The general principles for ethical research are:

1. Research should aim to maximise benefit for individuals and society and minimise risk and harm;
2. The rights and dignity of individuals and groups should be respected;
3. Participation should be voluntary and appropriately informed, wherever possible;
4. Anonymity, data protection and confidentiality should be paramount;
5. Research should be conducted with integrity and transparency;
6. Independence of research should be maintained and where conflicts of interest cannot be avoided they should be made explicit.

3. Ethical standards

If successful, and before commencement of the project, the proposal will be assessed for any ethical issues that may arise during or following the research. If any potential ethical issues are identified, the successful bidder will provide an ethical statement which sets out assurances on how the research meets the ethical standards required.

4. Minimising Risk and Harm

In carrying out their research, researchers should take every possible measure to minimise the risk of harm to any individual.

5. Rights of individuals and groups should be respected

Researchers should maintain respect for participants in all manners, and pay particular attention to minority ethnic groups, traditions and practices, and ensure knowledge of these practices before conducting research.

6. Informed Consent

In research involving participants, participation should be based on the freely given informed consent of participants. This implies a responsibility on the researcher to explain in appropriate detail (both in writing and verbally), in a language they can understand, and in terms meaningful to participants. This explanation should include the following:

- What the research is about;
- The nature of their participation;
- Who is undertaking and financing the research;
- Implications in terms of risks and benefits of participating in the research;
- Why it is being undertaken/purpose of the research;
- The name and contact details of the principal researcher(s);
- Information about what will happen to their information, how it will be used and disseminated, stored and when it will be disposed of.
- That their participation is entirely voluntary, and that a decision not to consent will have no adverse consequences;
- That participants have the right to withdraw from the study and withhold information at any time without affecting their use of services or need for assistance.
- That the researcher will be bound by any confidentiality agreement except in cases where information disclosed by the customer/tenant indicates a serious risk to self or to others. Where such issues requiring disclosure arise, they shall be reported to a Housing Agency Researcher who will inform the relevant body.
- Any intended follow-up contact as part of the current or future research.

Researchers should be explicit in their limits of confidentiality.

Research participants should understand that they can reject the use of data-gathering devices such as tape recorders and video cameras. Research data, records or films should not be communicated or used other than for the agreed purposes and with participants' written consent. When making notes, filming or recording for research purposes, researchers should make clear to research participants the purpose of the notes, filming or recording.

Special care should be taken where research participants are particularly vulnerable by virtue of factors such as age or disability. Researchers will need to take into account the legal and ethical complexities involved in those circumstances where there are particular difficulties in eliciting fully informed consent.

In cases where written consent cannot be obtained, such as with recorded telephone interviews or where the subjects are illiterate, informed oral consent should be obtained by documenting on the consent form. Where participants have impairments that limit understanding and/or communication to the extent that they are unable to give informed written consent, permission where possible should be obtained from a family member or other responsible adult, such as a caregiver or guardian, before proceeding with the research.

Researchers should decide on a project by project basis whether the provision of incentives to recognise and value participants' time and input into research (e.g. giving a token of appreciation) is appropriate.

The signed consent form and the information sheet together are proof of the process of informed consent.

7. Anonymity, Data Protection and Confidentiality

Data Protection Legislation applies to the Client and accordingly any work undertaken must fall within the remit of the General Data Protection Regulations and Data Protection Act 2018.
